WASHINGTON, Aug. 37 (WP). The U.S. Agriculture Department took action Friday to brake the soaring wheat prices that have resulted from huge sales to the Boviet Union.

U.S. bakers on Thursday bad asked the Price Board to grant them increases in the retail price of bread, claiming that export sales have reduced the domestic supply and have driven up wheat prices. The bakers asked a 1-to 3-cent-a-loaf increase.

The action taken by the Agriculture Department Friday changes the subsidy program for wheat exports. The department will no longer guarantee U.S. exporters a sliding scale of sub-sidies that pays the difference between the domestic and the world price.

Since July, when the U.S. and the Soviet Union reached a wheat sale credit agreement, exporters have sold the Soviet Union an estimated 400,000 bushels of wheat ebout one-fourth the total American crop.

Price Exceeds $2 "In the same period, the domestic price of wheat has climbed from about $1.50 a bushel to more than $2. "The action [limiting subsidies to exporters] is being taken to maintain ample supplies of wheat at reasonable prices for domestic consumers," the Agriculture Department said in a statement. Carrol Brunthaver, assistant secretary of agriculture for foreign, trade, said that the new policy on export subsidies was not simed at reducing domestic wheat prices hot might prevent further price rises. If the new policy causes exporters to sell less wheat, he said, more will be available in the U.S. market, thereby lessening the push toward higher prices.

The actual policy change is quite technical Until Friday, the department had been increasing the subsidy after rises in domestic prices so that the exporter never had to pay more than about $1.65 a bushel for wheat and could sell competitively in the world market. For example, an exporter could

Red Battle Units

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—North Vietnam has infiltrated 20,000 fresh troops across the Demilitarized Zone into northern battle areas of South Vietnam during the past month, it was learned Friday. Intelligence sources said the new troops—roughly the equivalent of two divisions—are replacing battered North Vietnamese in South

According to administration officials, a new drive against South Vietnam's porthern defense lines could come within weeks, possibly in September.

Estimates that the five-monthold North Vietnamese offensive is about to intensify are based in part on the recent capture of secret North Vietnamese military documents. These documents, it was learned, call for stepped-up military activity and mention specific dates in September.

Certain other documents, plus interviews with North Vietnamese prisoners of war, pointed to the last week in August as the time for opening a new Hanoi push. In this connection, the level of hostilities has risen in recent days.

Intelligence sources said they were convinced that the six North Vietnamese divisions and several independent regiments in the Quang Tri, Hué and Da Nang areas have been hurt badly hy heavy U.S. bombing raids and hattle action on the ground. The discovery in several instances of mass North Vietnamese graves proves the point, they said.

Qualified sources said the infiltration over the last four weeks is the heaviest since North Vietnam began its offensive five months ago. Many of the 20,000 replacements are coming from the two training divisions, the 320B and the 310th, which remain inside North Vietnam.

Most of the elements of the 312th Division, a front-line unit. also have moved into and through the DMZ in recent weeks.

third, field reports said. In the air war, the Seventh Pleet announced Navy jets attacked North Vietnam's major port city of Haiphong with some of the heaviest raids of the war yesterday, bombing five targets, including a shipyard.

Radio Hanol claimed seven U.S. jets were shot down during raids yesterday and today, and some pilots were captured. There was no immediate confirmaton from the U.S. command.

The field reports said South Vietnamese troops in and around the Que Son military district capital which was recaptured from the enemy Friday, were being heavily shelled with long-range 130-mm artillery and mortars. At least 40 South Vietnamese soldiers were reported wounded, but only ten of them bad been evacuated before nightfall because of beavy anti-zircraft fire that drove back government helicopters.

Bolstered by reinforcements, the 4th Regiment of the 2d Division rushed in from the northern front to launch a series of counterattacks to regain control of the valley. It is strategic because it controls access to Da Nang, South Vietnam's second largest city, and Highway 1, a vital roadway for the populous coastal lowlands south of Da Nang and east of Que Son. McGovern Names Women WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (AP). Sen. McGovern added five women to his male-dominated campaign staff Friday.

The Democratic presidential candidate named Ann Martindell, who had been a chairwoman of the New Jersey convention delegation, as deputy campaign director, and Texas liberal Frances (Sissy) Farenthold, co-chairwoman of the largely honorary National Citizens Committee for McGovern-Shriver. Rep. Bella S. Abzug of New York City and actress Shirley MacLaine were named co-chairwomen of a committee to advise McGovern on women's issues, and Anne Wexler, who had been Sen. McGovern's convention floor lead-er, was named head of voter registration efforts.

Yesterday, Sen McGovern's running mate, Sargent Shriver, announced the appointment of six women to top positions on his campaign staff.

Named were Prof. Doris Kearns, director of research and issues; Mary Ann Orlando and Jane Campbell, finance co-directors; Natalie Spingarn, speechwriter; Doris Ullman, press coordinator, and Lucille Larkin, press secretary to Eunice Shriver.

KAMPALA, Aug. 27 (Reulers).

Ugandan President Idi Amin
yesterday said his plans for black Ugandans to take over foreignowned busines es will be extended to include European enterprises whether they like it or not."

Speaking at a police training college here, Gen. Amin said the first phase in Uganda's "economic war" is to expel all Asians with British, Indian, Pakistani or Bangladesh nationality.

President Amin said today bowever, that some "non-citizen" Asians will be especially invited to stay in Uganda. Speaking at a meeting here with Pakistan's Minister of Food and Agriculture Ghaus Bakhsh Raisani, Gen. Amin said, "Noncitizen Asians whom the govern-ment would specially invite to stay would be welcome." He did not elaborate, but it is known that numbers of non-Ugandan Asian professional people have been asked to defer their departures for 12 months to facilitate the African takeover. Currently some 60,000 Asians have until Nov. 7 to leave the country, under a decree issued by the 44-year-old general on Aug.

"The second phase will be for black Ugandans to buy all shops, factories, cotton gins and bustnesses owned by Europeans and Asians, whether they like it or not," President Amin said. An official version of his speech gave no further details.

The First Veto

of China interposed his first veto at the UN Security Council, it had drama simply because it was the initial exertion by Peking of its authority as a permanent member of that body. In addition, of course, it contained those ironies that have been implicit in all of China's positions on Bangladesh: the champion, par excellence, of small nations and peoples groaning under an alieu yoke makes an exception in the case of the Bengalis. They have not been right to revolt, according to Peking: India has not been right to help them, and Peking will not see them eeated in the UN-which barred Peking for so long for not dissimilar reasons. China has a point, of conrse; India's role in the conflict has been far from disinterested, and its retention of prisoners of war as bargaining items not only runs counter to a UN resolution, as China pointed out, hut is neither humane nor good international practice.

Nevertheless, the disturbing aspect of the Chinese veto is the degree of animosity it reveals to persist between Communist China and Communist Russia, and the implications of this mood for world peace. Both have used the Western nations as whipping boys, each accusing the other of being too friendly to the imperialists. The Soviet Union points to the continued existence of the British foothold in Hong Kong as an example of

When the delegate of the People's Republic China's tolerance of American CIA activities in Asia, thus hitting two imperialist birds with one rhetorical missile. And it also protests the visit of Gerhard Schroeder, of the West German Christian Democratic party, as an example of Peking's cooperation with the "most reactionary" elements in Western Europe.

It is widely believed that the new vehemence in the exchange of Soviet-Chinese compliments stems from a stalemate in the border talks between the two Communist powers. That etalemate in itself is unfortunate so long as an active, concrete cause of friction exacerbates the ideological rivalry of the two countries. There will be the danger of an explosion that could shake the world. Even short of that, however, the kind of charges being bandled back and forth across Asia could diminish the chances for new and better international relationships-between the Soviet Union and Western Europe; between China and the United States, as well as between India and Pakistan and perhaps even between Hanoi and Washington. A delay in the admission of the very new state of Bangladesh into the United Nations cannot have very serious practical consequences either for Bangladesh itself or for the world organization. But the first Cbinese veto has emphasized many of the barriers to peace that exist in the worldand perhaps raised a few more.

Republican Mystery...

For a government dedicated to law and order, the Nixon administration gets itself invoived in some remarkable difficulties. For many weeks earlier this year, the story unfolded before the Senate Judiclary Committee of how the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. promised $400,000 to help finance the Republican National Convention and how officials in the White House and the Justice Department went through some extraordinary maneuvers to arrange an anti-trust supplement favorable to ITT.

That affair had scarcely died away before the Watergate scandal began to break. In June, five men were arrested for breaking into the Democratic National Committee office in the Watergate Hotel in Washington. They had in their possession electronic "bugging" and eavesdropping equipment, cameras and $5,300 in $100 bills with consecutive serial numbers.

Former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, then chairman of the Committee to Re-elect the President, promptly denied through a spokesman that there was any connection between the arrested interlopers and the Nixon campaign organization or the White House staff.

Then one of the men arrested turned out to be the Nixon committee's security coordinator. Federal and state investigators next learned that a sixth man_E. Howard Hunt-was invoived. He had worked until March 29 as a consultant for presidential assistant Charles Colson, who handles sensitive political assignments for the White House. Mr. Hunt has disappeared.

The money has now been traced. It turns out to be part of $114,000 which found its way from the Nixon headquarters to the Miami bank account of Bernard L. Barker, one of the five men arrested at the Watergate. Most of this money was funneled through a middleman in Mexico City. Former Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans, the chief money raiser for the Nixon campaign, continues to insist that he has no idea of how this money passed from the committee to Mr. Barker. But the attorney for the Nixon Finance Committee refused to answer the FBI's questions and was fired. Then the treasurer of the committee resigned. Mr. Mitchell has also resigned, though everyone denies any link to the Watergate episode.

Clark MacGregor, the President's new campaign manager, sald last month that he had satisfied himself that the Watergate affair "was not known to or sanctioned by anyone in senior status." But Mr. Mac-Gregor has never explained how he satisfied himself on this question.

It seems curious indeed that all these officials of the Committee to Re-elect the President were involved and all this money was being passed about without Mr. Mitchell or Mr. Stans having any idea what was going on. A messy kind of political espionage was being practiced. The public cannot be eatisfied with bland assurances. All those involved have to be brought to light and heid accountable.

...Milk and Money

campaign an extraordinary amount of trouble. First. Maurice Stans, the President's chief political money raiser, refused to divulge the names of the people who gave $10 million to the Nixon campaign fund in the weeks just before the new election finance law requiring disclosure of all names went into effect last April. Then auditors for the General Accounting Office, charged with enforcing the new law, discovered poseibly illegal discrepancies in the handling of some $500,000 in Nixon campaign funds.

When a news report of these discrepancies was published in the press, GAO officials neither confirmed nor denied the story. But the expected publication of the GAO findings has been delayed while these officials confer with Mr. Stans. Since the GAO is responsible to Congress and not to the Executive, it is to be assumed that the delay in making known its findings is due to the desire to acquire more information and does not reflect any yielding to administration pressure.

[The GAO report has now been made public. Story on Page 1.]

Meanwhile, documents in a private lawsuit have brought the 1971 milk price scandals back into view. On March 12 of last year. the Agriculture Department denied dairymen's request for a higher government-

Money seems to be causing the Nixon ordered price support for milk. On March 25. It reversed itself and granted the increase a shift which cost consumers upward of $500 million in higher milk prices.

Between those two dates, the political action committees of the dairymen's association contributed $50,000 to the Republican campaign fund. This money came in the form of checks to the law firm of Murray Chotiner, long-time political adviser to President Nixon, and was channeled by him to "dummy committees" set up to receive such contributions without violating the old Corrupt Practices Act. Later in the year, dairymen gave another $120.000. "It's not unusual to bleed you more later," a dairy spokesman remarked the other day.

Letters confirming the details of this oneavory transaction have now come to light in the course of a lawsuit filed by the National Farmers Organization against several dairymen's organizations. The attorney for the National Farmers Organization has called these letters to the attention of Attorney General Kleindlenst, pointing out that they "raise the most serious questions of violation of federal criminal statutes."

They certainly do. A grand jury investigation of the political payoffs to obtain the milk price increase is long overdue.

WASHINGTON.-Mr. Earle B. Marfield, Ku Klux Klan candidate for the Democratic Senatorial nomination, won the run-off primary yesterday in opposition to Mr. James Ferguson better known as "Farmer Jim." The result was no eurprise to those in close touch with political affairs in Texas, as it was conceded that Ferguson had little chance in this final. The Ku Klux Klan question has split both the Republicans and the Democratic parties in the state. It is the main topic of discussion politically and is expected to remain so until after the general elections in November.

Nixon Riding High on the Low Road

By James Reston

MIAMI BEACH-At no time since he came into public life has Richard Nixon dominated American politics as he does today, and yet he is still not using his vast power and prestige to unify the nation.

The main thing being asked about him now is not whether he will win in November, but what he will do with his victory, and if his acceptance speech here is any indication of the future, we are in for four more years of mistrust and division.

It was a very odd speech, It was clearly intended to appeal beyond his party to Democrats and independents to join him in a "new majority" based on the "common ideals" and "the great principles we Americans believe in together.

But once this presidential ideal of bipartisen cooperation had been defined, Mr. Nixon descended to a sinshing partisan attack that was a jumble of distortions, misleading half-truths and down-

Rates of Growth

It is simply not true, as he asserted, that the United States has "the highest rate of growth of any industrial nation," unless you jumble the figures out of all rational proportious. Japan, Germany, Canada and Italy all have higher growth rate now than the United States.

Nor is it true, as he insisted, that the United States has the lowest rate of inflation of any of the industrial states-Canada, Germany, Italy and Belgium bave lower rates over the last four

George McGovern has done many foolish and careless things since he entered the presidential campaign, but to present him as a man who would add "82 million people to the welfare rolls," increate taxes by "50 percent," destroy the free enterprise system -"tear it down and start again" -is the same old tricky demagoguery that has stained Mr. Nixrecord in every election since the forties.

He is riding high on the low road again, and the puzzling thing is why he resorts to these destructive tactics precisely at the time when he seems to be calling for reconciliation on the hasis of American ideals and principles. Oddly, it was Spiro Agnew here in Miami Beach who reacted to his renomination with a generous and healing spirit, and Mr. Nixon who talked, not like a President far ahead against Mr. McGovern,

Ten Argentine Guerrillas Leave Chile, Land in Cuba

HAVANA, Aug. 27 (Reuters).-Ten leftist guerrillas who fled Argentina on a hijacked plane arrived here yesterday from Chile, predicting further trouble for President Alejandro Lanusse'e 20vernment.

The guerrillas escaped from jail in Rawson, a coastal town, on Aug. 16 and hijacked an Argentine BAC-111 plane from nearby Trelew Airport to Chile. They were granted refugee status by Chilean President Salvador Allende just before leaving aboard a regular Cuban flight Friday

A week after their escape, 19 of their colleagues who had surrendered after helping in the venture, were machine-gunned by guards at Trelew Naval Air Base and 16 of them died. The shooting, which has come to be known as the Trelew Massacre, ied Chilean leftists to demand that Mr. Allende reject Argentina'e request for extradition. Argentina officially stated that those killed were shot while trying to escape.

Mr. Allende, a Marxist, said in a nationwide broadcast that his government bad granted them political asylum but had also taken steps to ensure they left. Chile as quickly as possible.

Convoyed to Airport

The guerrillas, including a 23year-old woman schoolteacher, were driven at high speed in an eight-vehicle convoy to Pudahuel Airport on the outskirts of Santiago. They had been in police custody.

The ten were welcomed in Havana by Manuel Pineiro, Cuban Central Committee member and deputy interior minister. They belonged to the Ejercito Revolutionario Popular (People's Revolutionary Army), the Armed Revolutionary Forces (FAR) and the Montoneros group.

One, a chemical engineering student, said the guerrillas' action was important because it was a concerted effort by the three organizations, two of which are Peronist, and that further such operations could be expected in Argentina.

Marcos Osati-by, for the Montoneros, said t.: Argentine regime was being undermined by various mass movements and the actions of armed organizations, which were seeking to create a united "national liberatic army." In an airport press conference,

By Robert Kleiman

NEW YORK (NYT).—One of the indestructible myths about the Vietnam war is that the nation's leaders drifted into it, unaware of where step-by-step decisions were leading. But as the scenario starts to unroll all over again, with massive bombing mounting toward the peak levels of the past, the myth needs was the introduction in February, 1965, of American air power on a large scale into the guerrilla war within South Vietnam that first transformed the role of the United States, from giving arms and the advice of a 24,000-man military mission into direct involvement in combat. Within weeks there began the sustained bombing of North Vietnam; organized units of the North Vietnamese Aimy invaded the South, and the United States committed ultimately more than half a million ground troops.

The week the American air war began, a visitor asked Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U.S. military commander in Vietnam whether the death and destruction already inflicted on the South Vietnamese countryside by Anterican-built planes, some with American pilot-advisers would not escalate enormously now and prove selfdefeating. Could the oft-proclaimed American objective of "winning the hearts and minds of the people"-in what was more a political than a military conflict be achieved through the apolication of murderous firepower. which inevitably would kill in nocent civilians as well as Viet

The Cornell University Air War scholars of many disciplines led by Raphael Littauer, professor of physics at Cornell, analyzed all the significant official and unofficial reports available on the American air war in Southeast Asia, its policies, its methods, its effectiveness—and its cost, both to the United States and the proples of Indochina. They dist uted their findings privately in November, 1971, and then revised and updated them for this publication by Beacon Press.
"The Air War in Indochina" is a cold, clinical study. But its revelations—many extrapolated from piecemeal data, then assembled like a jigsaw puzzle—are etartling. Some of its most strik-ing estimates were recently ourroborated by a leak of the secret 548-page National Security Council study memorandum on Vietnam (NSSM-1)-drafted in 1969 for President Nixon by eight government agencies and coordinated by Henry A. In the South, more than six million (about one-third of the population) are estimated to have become refugees. The number of urban Southerners (including those in squalid refugee shantyestimated 40 percent of the population, making South Vietnam more urbanized than Sweden, Canada, the Soviet Union, Austria Switzerland, Italy and all other Southeast Asian states.

Casualties Mount

Close air support of troops in action, often decisive to a conventional battle, can even be ef-fective against guerrillas. But civilian casualties then mount. Guerrillas are highly mobile and hard to distinguish from the population-especially from fastmoving jet aircraft. Intelligence is often faulty. The Air Force is under pressure from ground units to use area weapons, such as napaim and cluster-bomb units, even against snipers. Area weapons, by definition, are indiscrim-

Nevertheless, efforts were made. at the start, to limit civilian casualties. In August, 1966, after revelation of a dozen bombings of friendly troops and villages, Gen. Westmoreland appointed a board of senior officers to improve control procedures. "One mishap—one innocent civilian killed, one civilian wounded or one dwelling needlessly destroyed is too many," his directive stated.

But long before this review. which led to no known result, the whole character of the air war had been altered by its sheer volume. From about 1,000 sorties the month of January, 1965, before American air units were engaged, the tempo had soured more than tenfold by the end of that year, and then doubled sgain by 1968 to more than 20,000 a What was being struck? coveries of the Cornell researchers was that in the end less than 10 percent of the U.S. fixed-wing air activity in South Vietnam went into close air support of troops in combat. More than 90 percent was used for "interdic-tion," a term that has been stretched far beyond attacks on supply routes to encompass harassment, reprisal, area saturation in Communist staging zones and, in regions where the Viet Cong has been predominant, attacks "to influence the population: to cause them to move into areas under government control, or to make them stop supporting the insurgency." In a guerrilla war, the study points out, the enemy "may live intermingled with the population or may actually be the population ... To interdict such an enemy means to blanket all possible areas with firepower ... Seen in this light, generalized interdiction in Vietnam takes on the

During the peak years of the air war in South Vietnam, when fighter-bombers accounted for as many as 20,000 strike sorties a month, B-52s flew less than 1,600 sorties monthly. But the Cornell team discovered that about half the actual tonnage of aerial munitions dropped on South Vietnam was delivered by B-52s. (It undoubtedly is far higher now, with shout 200 R-52s (shout half the Strategic Air Command forcel now engaged in bombing Indoching-a five-fold increase since February and twice the peak number engaged before 1972). The penultimate in indiscriminate bombing is the area obliteration attack by giant B-52 stratofortresses of the SAC, each dropping about one hundred 500pound bombs within a fraction of a minute. Four typical sixplane missions can demolish an area equal to that destroyed by the Hiroshima atom bomb.

Information from the Cornell study and NSSM-1 on the civilian devastation inflicted by the air war is fragmentary but re-

By the end of 1987 about .70 percent of the villages in Quang Ngai Province to South Vietnam had been destroyed. During at least one period to 1968-69, about 90 percent of I Corps—the five northernmost provinces of South Vietnam-became a free fire Between 1966 and 1969. according to NSSM-1, the U.S. Novy alone reported that it had destroyed almost 36.000 "structures and damaged about 43,000.

The CIA to NSSM-1 complained about the lack of systematic information on civilian damage but concluded on the basis of hamlets take a tremendous beating." It noted that one extended series of reports covering 5.870 of South Vietnam's hamlets revealed that each month 4 percent are either bombed, etrafed, defoliated or otherwise harmed during the course of friendly military operations. A higher percentage of hamlets would appear to experience one or more of these obenomena in a minor form." Extrapolation of these figures could suggest that the total number of hamlet attacks over 12 months, including repetitions, may have exceeded 96 percent of the number of hamlets in those regions, if not in the country as o whole. Mr. Littauer and his colleagues essert that "deliberate attacks on the civilian population were not pure of the official policy." but evolved from a variety of "spe-cial cituations." The military wanted to make selective attacks on the guerrilles while depriving

Careful on North

Ironically, greater precautions were taken at one time to avoid civilian damage in North Vietnam than in the South. Targets in the North were approved by the White House. No ottacks in 1965 were permitted within a 30-mile radius of Hanoi and a 10-mile radius of Haiphong. Attacks on minor military facilities in populated areas were barred. In the monthlong campaign in July, 1966, that destroyed 70 percent of North Vietnam's oil storage capacity. much of it to urban areas, Washington insisted on extraordinary precautions: use of the most experienced pilots; Visual identification of targets in good weather; an axis of attack that avoided the most populated areas; maximum electronic countermeasures against anti-aircraft fire to limit pilot distraction; use of weapons of high precision delivery, and limitation of SAM and AAA suppression to sites outside populated areas. But such careful restrictions were rarely applied aft : that Last December's five-day, 1,000-sortic series of "protective reaction" strikes against North Victoria, in retaliation for the downing of four Phantoms over northern Leos, was almost ( tirely in had weather with the ground invisible. Pilots later called it 'a farce" and "sheer insanity" not to await better weather. President Nixon called it "very successful." When North Vietzam was first targeted, the Joint Chiefs of Staff found only eight industrial installations worth listing, the Defense Intelligence Agency re-ported to Secretary Robert S. Mc-Namars, in November, 1965, Military-congressional pressure later made the target list a political football in what the Cornel study desorbes as a "highly cynical mimbers game," Early in 1967, on Joint Chicis of Statt urging, President Lyndon B. Johnson added a number of industrial targets within urban areas previously barred and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs reported that there were no important military targets left in the North; the only escalation possible would be the mining or bombing of ports and irrigation dikes and a land invasion of North Vietnam, Nevertheless, in July-August, 1967, presimably to blunt criticism from the Senate Armed Services Committee, President Johnson expanded the area subject to armed reconnaissance and somehow found 44 new fixed targets.

were allotted a number of sorties fortnightly to avoid interservice rivalry. As a result many missions evidently have been flown in poor weather to secondary targets to meet that "quots." The list of fixed targets usually was exhausted quickly, and pilots then worked off their quotes on armed reconnaissance, missions against trucks, railroad cars, barges and even less important targets-rather than dump their bombs in the ocean before landing. With worthwhile fixed targets scarce, such armed reconnaissance missions made up nearly three-fourths of the sorties over the North flown in 1965 and 90 percent by 1967; estation of Indochina from the air, perhaps the deepest lies in its overwhelming fatility. The the bombing has been marginal at best and, more often, self-

Command in Saigon claim in NSSM-1 that the bombing of North Vietnam and Laos was effective because it destroyed 12 to 14 percent of the trucks and 20 to 35 percent of the supplies on the infiltration trails. But the CTA and the Office of the Secretary of Defense punctured that claim. The Kissinger summary noted: "OSD and CIA find that the enemy needs in South Viet-nam-10 to 15 trucks of supplies per day [carrying 30 to 50 of wespons and ammunition]are so small and his supply of war materiel so large that the enemy can replace his losses eastly, increase his traffic flows slightly, and get through as much supplies to South Victuam as he wants to in spite of the bombing." ninefold in overall activity. That the bombing stiffened North Victoria's will to fight and reduced dissent at home is something on which all analysts agree Economically, North Victorial paradoxically also gained. Official Pentagon and CIA estimates show that aid from other Communist countries totaled four to six times as much as was destroyed. With vigorous road and rail building, even the capacity of the North Vietnamese transport network-a main target-increased under the bombing, the CIA reported in NESM-1. But the dollar cost to the United States in lost airmats alone (almost 1,100 planes) was es the damage inflicted on North Vietnam by the 1965-68 bombing. . The military uselessness of most of the combing bears directly on the issue of American wat crimes, something the Cornell scholars discuss but leave to the reader to judge. They note that detailed international law is lack-ing or outdated for air warfare. But grave violations can be inferred from the principles that govern the agreed rules of land and paval warfare. The most serious euch violation, they point out, is of the rule requiring a reason-able "proportionality" to warfare between the damage caused and the military gate sought or anticipated. There is no sign in batted and racial contempt for the Asian that played a role in the My Lai massacre by American ground troops. Nevertheless the 'unstated conclusion that shricks out of Cornell's deadpan study is that the American air war in South Vietnam has included a long list of both officially sanctioned and officially ignored aerial My Lais. How did this abuse of air power originate? Prof. Littauer and his colleagues believe it was not deliberate decisions that led to the vast over-employment of American airpower in Vietnam as much as it was a case of the vast "availability of airpower ... setting the U.S. on the path it has followed." Mr. Littauer and his colleagu finished their book before the ca of Gen. John D. By Olga Connolly MUNICH (NYT).—It's almost incredible that of all the Olympics I've attended as an athlete, this is the first one in which I've taken part in the opening ceremonies.

The reasons I didn't take part in the past were trivial-either I had a competition m the discus the following day or my shoes didn't fit and I didn't want to risk blisters. This time, none of that interfered. I knew I'd be marching in the ceremony, but I had no idea that I would be the United States fine bearer. When athletes from the different sports elected me, it came as a surprise, and it moved me quite a hit because, prior to the meeting. I had gone through several rounds of speaking out against what I thought were injustices on the team. I was trying to bring to people's attention some aspects of our participation in the Olympics that would be appropriate, like

Deace I had spent the last week largely being held in disfavor with the U. S. Olympic Committee. I knew how athletes felt in track and field about these issues, but not in the 20 other sports. What I realized after our discussions was that my ideas were not that unique and that I was simply putting into words the feelings of a

Elected Captain

That feeling was apparently reflected in my being elected captain of the women's track and field team, and it was strengthened in my mind when I was told I had been named the official flag bearer. So here I was faced with a bitter question—what did the fing-bearing and the American flag mean to me?

I tried to think about it in my room earlier in the day, and I thought about it even more when they put the flag in my hand for the ceremonies. To me, the flag represented every person in America, and it represented the tradition of freedom and those very brave individuals who have always tion from their contemporaries who were not as perceptible and As we took our place in line for the ceremonies. I thought

I carried it as high as I could. At that moment, I caught a glimpse of the Soviet flagbearer, who was a very large man, a heavyweight wrestler, and I saw some other flag bearers who were large men. I thought that in order to make the flag of the United States as beautiful as I wanted to see it, we needed not only strong men but also very strong women. So I gripped the flan in one hand, and I also carried the flag in one hand, just like the men did.

As all the nations assembled in the grassy infield of the stadium, and the speeches and music and entertainment went on, the athletes, some of whom carried flowers, started to throw the flowers to one another.

They would sneak out of their formations to shake hands or to embrace or to take a picture together, it was such a relaxed feeling. How beautiful all of me were together.

Dream of Hope

I started to dream. I was dreaming that through television, this spirit had emanated out of the gates of the Olympic Village to every country and especially across the sea back home, and that the next morning, as Americans awakened, every American would somehow be touched by it.

I wished that morning people would come out of their homes, and they would meet the whites the browns, the blacks, the native Americans—and the only term they would have when referring to each other would be "Hello, brother, and hello, sister. I wished that morning all the politicians would wake up and they would see and they would somehow have forgotten about the lobbyists, and they would wake up and say. "From now on I have to work for my constituents, and what's best for them. I was thinking that President Nixon might wake up and be so affected by the Olympic spirit that, to honor all mankind, give hope to the world and establish himself as a true leader seeking peace, he would make an announcer that for the duration of the Olympic Games, he would stop all bombing to Southeast Asia At that point, the ceremonies ended, and I started to believe my dreams. And as we walked out of the stadhum, I again felt the mood of peace and protherhood, and I lifted the flag and carried it as high as I could.

Despite New York's heat, the stock market shivered last Thursday and dropped more sharply than it had all summer.

Apparently it got a little scared when a few of Wall Street's small group of original thinkers talked about the chances of a credit crunch in 1973. That up-setting thought outweighed news of economic strength and fat corporate profits.

Albert M. Wojnilower, the respected economist at the First Boston Corporation, for example, suggested that the economic ex-pansion might trigger a sharp rise in short-term interest rates that 'may well culminate in a short, but painful, credit squeeze within the next 12 months." While Dr. Wojnilower and some others have been expressing this view for a little time now, the credit markets last week moved toward higher rates and talk of a credit crunch seemed all the more

Rates on three-month Treasury bills rose to 4.23 percent Friday from 4.06 percent in the government's weekly sale of these key short-term securities last Monday. Other short-term interest rates also moved upward, and the trend spilled over to affect bond yields. Yields on high-grade electric utility bonds rose to 7.50 percent from 7.40 percent a week earlier. Then, too, the Chase Manhattan Benk and several other major banks lifted to 5 1/2 percent the basic interest rate they charge their most credit-worthy corcustomers in another porate action that beightened the stock market's concern. Besides its skittishness over interest rates, the stock market last week was a bit vulnerable because prices had risen with very little interruption for about weeks. The Dow Jones industrial average had risen from

Prices on N.Y. Stock Exchange Take Slide

After Fears of a Credit Squeeze Increase

NEW YORK, Aug. 27 (NYT).—Prices on the American Stock Exchange and the Over-the-Counter market dropped every day last week with the largest dip occurring on Thursday, What happened at the two exchanges was in accord with the action at the New York Stock Exchange, where prices declined sharply in response to an announcement of higher prime interest rates set by the Chase Manhattan and other major canks. The price change index supplied by the Amex fell 0.25 for the week, closing at 26.71, with 0.12 of that loss coming on Thursday, the sharpest drop since July 17.

Trading on the Amex was moderate during the week with volume totaling 17.99 million shares compared with 19.99 million the previ-

a major role. It is proper, and indeed essential, to pick up clues from one's opponents' behavior. On the diagramed deal, South neglected to draw an inference from the bidding that might have saved him a major defeat.

When West's opening one-heart bid was raised to game, South had a difficult decision to make. He decided that he just needed the two black queens in the North band to have a good chance of a game, so he ventured four spades. West doubled promptly. but East passed reluctantly, and the anction ended there.

West led the heart king, and South unhappily scanned the dummy: He had caught North without a single honor in the black suits, and the nine highcard points were going to be worth just one trick.

South put up the heart ace in dummy and discarded a dia-mond. He led the club nine from dummy and had a problem when Unlike chess, which is 99 East produced the three. West percent technique, bridge is a presumably held the K-Q of game in which psychology plays nearts, the queen of spades, and one, has not both, of the minor-suit aces. Finally, South played low, and muttered to himself when West produced the queen West continued hearts, and South was forced to ruff.

The declarer cashed one high trump and surrendered a club trick to East, who played a third round of hearts. When South ruffed, he was reduced to K-J of trumps, and Q-10-8 were missing.

South proceeded optimistically to cash the spade king, but the actual distribution was a disaster. When South next led a low club, West ruffed and drew South's spade jack with the queen. Dummy eventually made a diamond trick, but South was down five tricks for a penalty

As South's partner was quick to point out in the post-mortem, the speed of West's double and East's reluctance to pass the double surely indicated a 4-1 trump split. If South had acted on that assumption, he would have led a third round of clubs instead of cashing the spade. The result would then have been three tricks hetter: a 500 misfortune instead of a 1,400

DAUGHTER BUFFALO By Janet Frame. George Brnziller. 212 pp. 85.95.

Reviewed by Josephine Hendin

"GRANDFATHER died chok-ing with a peanut in his windpipe, or was it a slice of glass-filled New York angel calle?" asks Daughter Buffalo, Janet Framc's New York is a great gorge on lethal foed, a pienic on killing sweets and carrion delicacies. Miss Frame Serves up derelicts gone rotten en 42d Street; she dishes out the dead rich like so many chilled hors d'oeuvres, "Daughter Buflalo" is about death's gourmands, those hungries who need the taste of relic meat, who are comed to crave glass-filled angel cake, and who end by leaving the cake and eating only the glass. Writing at the very edge of the gretesque, Miss Frame reaches for those back alleys of the mind that shelter absolute need. Her characters come alive as obsessions: Talbot Edelman, a wealthy young doctor, loves Turnlung, a poor, 75-year-old writer. Turn-lung. craves a six-month-old buffalo in the Central Park Zoo, Edelman has a passion for Sally, a dog he surgically dismembers. A philosopher of death, Turnlung finds a subject in chilly Edelman. Excited by Turnlung's physical decline, Edelman makes love with him. How to explain such tastes? Miss Frame does not. She makes morbidity a spectacle, a brilliant, mutilating feast. Like human buffalo, Turnlung and Edelman are players in a mental zoo, performers of death feats who find, consuming each other and themselves, some way to fill the psychic belly.

Like a surreal cartoonist, Miss Frame renders personality as a set of gestures. Her characters' passions are their deeds, their inner lives are their behavior. They are precisely what they do. Talbot Edelman, once interested in embryology, gives up the pursuit of creation for the study of abortion brains, He learns nothing about himself from the process of growth and so gives himself entirely to death. He acquires a fiancée who specializes in "sexually unfinished children"; he dismembers his dog, and he becomes an expert in "death studies." Embedded in each bizarre event is the sense that he sees himself as the victim of some uterine process that is less like hirth than the whirring expulsions of his mother's garbage disposal. Aborted, unfinished, undone, ground down, Edelman has no organs of feeling or belief. As he anesthetizes his dog to extract her eye, cut into her heart, or pierce her vitals, he plays out his own dismember-Turnlung has a mania for mastery and control, a need to cominate fate that takes him to the limits of the pathetic and ridiculous. Less successfully realized than Edelman, he is an anomaly, a lyrical theoretician who speaks in poems to death as a revolutionary style. The first human act is, he insists, to war against creation, to fight against the nterine home. "Our final role," he continues, "must be that of turncoat, turnbeart, turnlung." So he greedily gathers his age about himself, polishing the symptoms of physical decinue as though they were weapons for the imminent war against life, breath and blood. And he adopts for his daughter a bewildered buifalo who has somehow chosen to refuse life, finding in her act conformation of his own sense that to surrive one must turn against life. For one flourishes only in the moment of turning.

Miss Frame is obsessed with the moment of recoll—the time of turning, for Enclman, from embryology to abortion, for Turn-lung, from breathing to not breathing, for the buffelo, that moment when she chose death. Each turn amounts to an ahandonment of living, an abandonment of any attempt to see cheself in life. Miss Frame sees turning as a tender act, a reaching out, as Edelman docs for Turnlung, across the recognition of one's own paucity. Her notel is a poem to the union of the living dead, a Liebestod based on common mutilation and common need. Pathetic and ugly, sad and destructive, it has the grim power of life drawn up as a suicide

Miss Frame attempts to connect the private acts of Edelman and Turnlung with the suiden, twisting hostility of New York. She clearly meant the city to come alive as a field of human buffalo, a herd of men lumbering between the stupefection of living death and an active passion for destruction. But her talent is not for the city, not for force and magnitude. She writes with a lyrical brilliance, with a genius for the narrowest, the darkest corners of human need. In this novel, her vision is no wider than a coffin, no deeper than a grave. But she writes with a beauty that confers a morbid grandeur, that makes poetry of the particular, the private, the enclosed. And she has written a novel as gleaming as pure, black, shattered glass.

Union today scored the first knockout and Louis Self of Toledo. Ohio got the U.S. squad off to a winning start in the first session of Olympic hoxing.

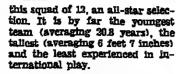

Kusnetsov, a schoolteacher from Anstrachan, knocked out Harouna Lago of Niger in the contest. Self. a 21-year-old factory worker, gained a unanimous decision over lefthanded Maurice Aveang, a Tahitian-born Frenchman, in another featherweight

Self said he was more troubled hy his slippery boots than by the southpaw style of the Frenchman. "I lost my balance several times," he said.

Self floored the Frenchman in the first round with a right uppercut end a left hook. The scores of the five judges were 60 to 56. 60 to 58, 60 to 58, 59 to 57 and 60 to 56.

The victory gave Self a berth in the round of 32. Self's next opponent will be Angelos Theot, a stocky Greek, who won a unanimous decision over Yemane Lems of Ethiopia.

Only Perfect Record

Can such an inexperienced group maintain the only perfect record in any Olympics, 56 etraight victories in the seven basketball Olympics? "We can and we will," said

Dwight Jones, a 20-year-old from Houston who is the most internationally experienced on the squad because he was on the Pan-American Games team that lost a game to Cuba and the title to Brazil last year. Ten of the 12 players are undergraduates and six are sophomores.

The Americans answered much of the doubts hy performing with poise, determination and the kind of rugged defense that three-time Olympic coach Hank Ibe is

The Americans held the jittery Czechs to one field goal in the first 10 minutes, led by 34-12 at halftime, and couldn't help ess-ing off in the second half, although points can be important if the United States leses a game-It will play seven games in a round-robin, with two teams to qualify from each of two groups for the semifinals.

The United States had four men in double figures—Tom Hen-derson of New York with 16 points. Jones with 15 (and 7 re-bounds). Kevin Joyce of Merrick, N.Y. with 12 and Jim Brewer of Maywood, III., with 10. Brewer shot 83 percent from the floor (5 of 6) and Jones hit on 6 of 6, but the team hit on only 45 percent of its shots.

Brilliant Pageantry Opens Game w By Red Smith

MUNICH, Aug. 27 (NYT).-To the accompaniment of a swinging dance band, becoming cannon and the pop-pop-pop of sapping Bavarian bullwhips, the Olympic Games opened yesterday before 80,000 cash customers with thousands of freeloaders looking on from the crest of a mountain of rubble created by the bombs of World War II and conceivably 800 million more watching by satellite television.

After 7,000 athletes from 121 nations marched into Munich'e gaudy new stadium in an 80minute parade, President Gustav Heinemann of West Germany mounted a pale blue rostrum festooned with yellow flowers and delivered in German the pronunclamento that never varies.

"I declare open the Olympic Games celebrating the 20th Olym-piad of the modern era."

The weather was brilliant, the color exuberant, the great crowd obviously enchanted and the whole splendiferous occasion free -outwardly, at least—of political, racial and social undertones. When the 2 1/2 hours of pageantry ended, the feeling seemed to be general that perhaps the next two weeks of competition in 22 sports would help neal some of the wounds of the past—siurring the memory of the 1936 Olympics in Berlin, which Adolf Hitler's propagandists made into a Nasi carnival, giving a happier meaning to the name of this city, which for 34 years has been synonymous with appeasement.

Torch Arrives

Ritualistically speaking, the high point was, as always, the arrival of the Olympic torch, lighted July 28 in Olympia in Greece and carried about 3,500 miles by an international relay team of 5,976 runners. Gunter Zahn, an 18-year-old middle distance runner, did the last leg into the stadium, where he was joined by representatives of the four continents outsida Europe— Jim Ryun of the United States, Derek Clayton of Australia Kenjio Kimihara of Japan and Kenya's Kipchoge Keino.

With Zahn leading and Ryun running last, they made a threequarter turn of the synthetic track of brick-red Rekortan to the foot of a golden stairway. There Zahn peeled off, loped np 138 steps to the rim of the stadium and plunged his torch into a tall birdbath. Immediately flames burst from this receptacle, to burn day and night until the closing ceremony Sept. 10.

In this and other respects, devotions adhered faithfully to the liturgy prescribed for this quadriennal flestival, but the choreo-graphers worked in some new

A Mad Housewife

ASHINGTON.—Dear Dr. Om-

ed medical know-it-all: The other evening my wife came down with a sudden attack of melancholy right in the middls of watching the Republican National Convention tion on television. and I told her it was probably caused by the roundsteak we had had for dinner some two hours before the

Along with the roundsteak we Baker had each taken two glasses of a surprisingly good Chateau Lynch-Moussas, '67. have read in one of the medical columns in a newspaper somewhere that drinking a wine which is too good for the meal you drink It with often causes severe melancholy in a married woman, particularly in August.

Am I not correct? If not. I would appreciate your analyzing the causes of my wife's melancholy for the benefit of your millions and millions of morbidly

DISTRESSED HUSBAND.

Dr. Omniquack answers: If I were a less sensitive person. I would say that your wife's melancholy problem arose from her realization that she was tied to a husband who not only reads syndicated doctors in the press, hut may also zing off letters to them informing half the countryside every time she has two glasses of wine.

The explanation, however, cannot be disposed of quite so glibly in this case. The causes of your wife's melancholy were, in fact, extremely complex,

The onset occurred while she was watching the Repoblican National Convention, a television event celebrating the certainty that life in the United States will go on for the next four years very much as it has gone for the past four years.

While absorbing this fact, your wife reflected that the tasteless roundsteak which you had consumed for dinner had cost $1.85

She reflected almost simultaneously that the bottle of Chatcan Lynch-Moussas, '67, had cost $4.69, and that, unless somebody stopped the Japanese from trying to drink all the wine in France, this already outrageous price would almost certainly go to $12 a bottle in another year.

In addition, the n recently informed her that the telephone company had been authorized to raise the orice of her

By Russell Baker These same depressing newspapers also informed her that niquack, nationally syndicatthe Federal Power Commission had granted boons to the oil-andgas industry which would raise the price of natural gas. As the Republicans were joyously shouting "Four More Years!" she was recalling that her house is heated by natural gas. Then she remembered that your local regulatory agency which grants your local monopolies approval to raise prices had just granted your local power company approval to charge her more money for electricity.

Not long ago, she then recalled, water rates had gone up nearly 20 percent. We cannot tell for certain what the sequence of dismal reflections was from this point. Ws know, of course, that she was all too aware that the Social Security tax had been raised yet again hy the Congress, and that the local income tax had been boosted startlingly for persons in her despicable (upper-middle) income class a year or so ago when she was away vacationing someplace where the price of suntan oil had been increased.

This undoubtedly reminded her of the Democratic National Convention and of Sen, McGovern, with his ghastly promise to abolish persons of her despicable (upper-middle) income class. Can we doubt that sensing herself ground between the threats of McGovern (abolition) and Nixon (erosion), she began that descent into an all-too-natural melancholy which you callously ascribe to a mismatch of wine and meat?

Certainly, as the Republicans menaced her with cries of "Four More Years!" her melancholy must have deepened as she reflected upon what the last four had wrought in her budget. The incredible increase in the cost of automobile insurance. The rise in the price of householder's insurance. Those incessant increases in college tuition,

Then, of course, she would have seen the recent news stories about the price of meat rising by 3.8 percent in July. And those the week before portending the inevitable increase in the price of cars, after the election if not before. The unions, she realized, would not take that without a fight. Union dues had already gone up. There would probably be fantastic strikes, she must have thought; that would mean less income.

Does that answer your question? (Signed) Dr. OMNIQUACK. P.S. Due to the unbelievable advances in modern levels of medical and hospital incompetence, the Blue Cross and Blue Shield rates for your group are being increased, starting imm: li-

Skyscrapers: Build Them Better, Not at All?

By Israel Shenker

BETHLEHEM, Pa.—Not everybody wants to go up in the world, but everybody here at the first international conference on the high-rise building was prepared to examine the consequences of going up.

The 570 participants from 44 countries included engineers, architects, officials and skeptics from the humanities. The conference grew so large that it spilled over from Lehigh University, the host, into the neighboring low-rise junior high school (three stories).

Introspection hegan two years ago, with regional conferences and money from the National Science Foundation. People then talked about building techniques. But as skyscrapers became spacescrapers and pierced the heavens of developing as well as developed countries, the question he-came not how to build them better, but whether to build them at all.

In San Francisco, where there are now severs height restrictions; in Paris, where the skyline's French accent has an American overlay; in Hong Kong, where the colony's crown is set ever higher, the

'Ego Environment'

In Bethlehem, Thomas C. Kavanagh, an urban planner from the heights of Gotham, urged attention to "ego environment"— psychic conditions favoring creative life. Is the environment of a skyscraper made to the measure of man? "A high-rise building is like the [Boeing] 747," said C. Allin Cornell of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "I can't think of any advantage."

He warned against overconfidence. "The assumption is that in building planes or cars, engineers can be fallfble, while in construction they don't make mistakes," he said. "Not that buildings are unsafe at no speeds, but that perfect safety is illusory."

"High-rise buildings give me claustro-phobia," said Prof. C. Martin Duke of the University of California, Los Angeles, "and I wouldn't be happy unless I could go in the back yard to garden. I own my house, and I also own-in a poetic sense-the street and trees which lead there. When I return home in the evening, that's where I leave my worries."

Fred K. Chang, a structural engineer, stressed vibrations. "Eyeball frequency is 60 to 90 cycles per second," he said. this building shakes 60 to 90 cycles per second, our eyeballs will fall out.

"Our stomach hangs on muscles, and when set in motion our stomach shakes three or four times per second. Machinery on a floor sometimes makes it vibrate at a few cycles per second. Result: stomach ache.

"Your architect and engineer might tell you their building is good for a hundred years and the prettiest thing ever built, but if human beings aren't taken into account, your building is a failure, Except for the zoo, buildings are for people."

Takeo Naka, a Tokyo engineer, complained that almost everyone at the conference wanted to build tall buildings-at least for others.

"Here is a letter from my friend Alister MacDonald, son of the former prime minister, Ramsay MacDonald." he said. "He builds tall buildings, but he is living and sleeping in a two-story London home with beautiful roses in his garden. I don't like a high-rise mansion either, and my wife has said this: Ten years ago we could see Mount Fuji, but now high buildings block the view."

"Many people in Japan like to command a beautiful view, and all they see is beautiful neon and beautiful traffic," said his colleague Makoto Watabe. "I can see Mount Full from my house on New Year's. Day when no factories are working and the air is clear, also after a typhoon has washed the air, and then-if I am fortunate—there is a second typhoon."

Duffin Sfintesco, vice-chairman of the Joint Committee on Tall Buildings, set up by the American Society of Civil Engineers and the International Association for Bridge and Structural Engineering, stressed the problem of implanting tall buildings in old European cities.

"Some people even say we must now remove the tops of some of the tall buildings," he reported.

A 42-story apartment building is rising near Mr. Sfintesco's Paris office, but he will continue to drive an hour daily each way from his home in the Chantilly "If I lived next to my office, I couldn't hear the nightingale or cuckoo, Ibrahim Adham El-Demirdash of Cairo University considers the high-rise as inevitable as the Nile. "Wa are not worms ceaselessly moving in only two directions, up and down the stem of a reed," he said. "The third dimension is a reality, and we even speak of the fourth dimen-

Like First Fish

Those who resent living on the 50th story are those not accustomed to it. But they will get accustomed, like the first fish that stepped ashere."

"My sympathies are with Greece," said Douglas D. Feaver, who teaches classics at Lebigh. "Their solution was to hive off colonies instead of building up or building out.

"The criticisms being offered about the high-rise buildings today were voiced in ancient Rome-lack of community, alienation, exploitation of the poor, hazard of fire, muggers, drunken builles, noise from vehicles and crowding.

The most prestigious floor was the ground floor. Only those living there had private latrines and running water. The pipes they used were usually made of lead, so the rich died of lead poisoning and the poor survived."

Prof. Lynn S. Beedle of Lehigh, chairman of the Joint Committee, lives in a:

two-story suburban home:
"You're chairman of this whole project. on tall buildings," his wife said to him, "and you know I wouldn't live in a tall building for anything in the world."

making movies," says Cary Grant, now 68 but still remantic-looking. "In pictures you're the result of everybody else's talents. In business, you come on straight."

Fortme magazine found Grant on the banks of the River Shannon in County Clere, Preisnd, in a romantic setting but on a practics) mission.

He is a puriner and director of Shannonside Roldings, Ltd., a company that is developing some 500 scree of rolling farmland into a vacation and second home community for Irish-Americans, Europeans and others who, like Grant, prefer "blue-jean living."

The business monthly estimates that the project eventually will be worth in excess of $50 million and contain condominiums, bouses. a theater, R golf course and a pub. Grant is also a director of Faberge, the fragrance manufacturer, and Western Air Lines.
